Humility

Humility gives one a true sense of place. It reminds us of our true status as creatures of God and equality with others. Humility helps one accept life's burdens. Humility helps us cope with our personal limitations and life situations which do not seem to have rational explanations. Humility teaches us to have an open mind and heart so that we are willing to learn from others. Finally, humility allows one to walk in the shoes of others and act with compassion, especially with respect to the poor.

As a virtue, humility goes to the core of character. It is the Mother of all virtues. It isn't a "mask" we put on as a means of social self-abasement or a means of social climbing. True humility is simply to know our place in the greater scheme of things. It means seeing ourselves through God's eyes and humbly and lovingly accepting what we see. Knowledge of self is one of the keys of the spiritual life. This knowledge and self-acceptance gives us a sure means of coping with times of uncertainty, and we certainly are experiencing those times in the life of the Church today.

Our Lord says: "He who exalts himself will be humbled, but he who humbles himself will be exalted."

In Christ,
 Fr. Jeff Fasching
